The Guardianship of Children

The Guardianship of children, involving the care and management of funds bequeathed to them by parent or friend—that is a position of trust which calls for a high sense of duty and thorough competence. Innocent children should never have to suffer at the hands of an incompetent guardian and need not suffer when an old and tried Corporation like the Toronto General Trusts Corporation can be appointed the Guardian of their real and personal estate. We are the Guardians of the Estates of hundreds of children, and these Guardianships receive our special care and attention.

Prospectus

The Rose Society of Ontario has been formed for the furtherance and encouragement of the cultivation, study and exhibition of Roses throughout the Province.

The seat of the Rose Society is at Toronto, where its records and library shall be kept.

It is intended to hold two Annual Rose Exhibitions in Toronto; one in June and one in the Autumn.

Competitions for prizes are divided into the following classes:

CLASS I.—Professionals; comprising all such persons and corporations as carry on the trade of growing and selling flowers.

CLASS II.—Semi-Professional; comprising all persons who do not grow flowers for profit, but who keep gardeners not otherwise or elsewhere employed.

CLASS III.—Semi-Amateurs; comprising all such persons who do not grow flowers for profit, but have the occasional assistance of gardeners (not solely employed by themselves) in the cultivation of roses.

CLASS IV.—Amateurs; comprising all those persons who do not grow flowers for profit, and who cultivate roses without the assistance of any gardener.

The Annual Meeting

A special meeting of the members took place on December 1st, at 8 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. C. E. Burden, 494 Avenue Road, to present the prizes awarded at the Summer Exhibition, and to consider the amending of the Constitution.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. Burden, with a nice word to each winner. One exception to this was the Roseholme Challenge Cup which was presented by the donor Mrs. Walter Lyon, to Mrs. G. G. Adam, who having won it for the third time in succession, received from Mrs. Lyon a handsome silver basket.

The suggested amendments to the Constitution were read by Mr. Morton. After discussion, Mr. Morton moved that these amendments be adopted. This was seconded by Mr. Burden and carried.

Following the amendments to the Constitution, the Annual Meeting took place, the President in the chair. The minutes were taken as read, and signed. The financial report was read, and it was approved and adopted.

The President now addressed the meeting, speaking of the progress we had made during the year, in spite of the disappointing financial statement, caused by the smaller attendance than was expected, at the Exhibition, which was unfortunately coincident with the first day of the street car strike. He regretted that for the present the idea of the Test Garden had to be postponed.

In the absence of Senator Nicholls, chairman for the Test Garden Committee, Mrs. Adam reported on the work for the Test Garden.

Mr. Burden then reported on the Summer Exhibition.

Mr. Brush now moved that the meeting proceed to the election of the Committee for the ensuing year, as provided for by the amended Constitution. Mr. Lyon seconded this, and it was carried. Nominations were made, and the elections followed. While the ballots were being counted, Mrs. Burden very kindly invited the meeting to have coffee and sandwiches. The President then reported that the following members had been elected to the Committee: Mrs. Charles Temple, Miss Beardmore, Mr. S. B. Brush, Mr. W. H. Lyon, Mr. P. H. Mitchell, Mr. E. L. Morton, Mr. A. D. Heward, Mr. S. B. McMichael, Mrs. C. E. Burden, Dr. A. H. Rolph, Mr. F. L. Green, Mr. W. B. Burgoyne,

Mr. A. B. Patterson, Mrs. Dunnington-Grubb, Miss Marion Armour, Miss Eleanor Strudley, Mr. J. H. Dunlop, Professor F. E. Buck, Miss Mary Yates, Mr. C. E. Burden. A vote of thanks to the host and hostess of the evening was unanimously carried. The meeting then adjourned.

President's Address

IN spite of the financial report which you have just heard, there are other things worthy of praise. During the past year although not accomplishing all we set out to do, the Society has done very good work. It is becoming known as an Ontario Society, a great many letters coming from points outside Toronto asking advice on rose culture. It is also noticeable that at our exhibition a great many prizes go to growers from outside points. This is very encouraging for I believe it is our wish to be known as an Ontario Society and not a Toronto one, though of course Toronto comes in for its share of consideration. Of course we all know that the Society could not live without the support given by Toronto members.

In deciding the date for our exhibition it should be remembered that we try to please Ontario and not any one district. The exhibition this year considering the bad day and unfortunate street car strike, was one to be proud of.

Senator Nicholls who won no less than six prizes as well as prize for "The best rose in the Show," is to be congratulated. Miss Beardmore's exhibit was unusually wonderful. Her rose garden is not a large one, and a short time before the exhibition had no roses of any account in it, but Miss Yates and Miss Beardmore know how to produce roses for exhibition and no doubt will tell you the secret if you ask them.

Mr. Burden as chairman of the Exhibition Committee deserves our greatest thanks. He had a big job and worked hard and well, and here I must not forget Mr. Brush who with coat off and sleeves rolled up seemed to enjoy hard work.

The monthly Bulletins, as in the past have been much enjoyed and did I am sure a great deal to keep up our interest in our gardens.

A great many meetings have been held by the different committees and I should like to thank the members who attended these for their interest in the Society in doing so. We all know that it is often hard to attend meetings, but at the same time a large attendance at committee meetings is a great help and encouragement. What the Society would do without Miss Armour, I do not know. She did not miss a meeting the whole year and has been a great help to your President, and he certainly needed it.

I am sorry to say there are two most regretable resignations. Members who have been two of the best and hardest of workers in the interest of the society: it will indeed be hard to do without Mrs. Gibbons as a worker in our interest. What she did through the press must have been appreciated all over Ontario. Mr. McMichael, who has worked for us for many years also threatens to make room for someone else.

Here let me say that a great deal of the success of the Society in the past has been due to the hard work and good ideas of Mrs. Gibbons and Mr. McMichael. I have heard it said that it is good to have new members on the committees, to avoid the danger of becoming fossilized. This may be true in a sense, but we cannot afford to lose our most useful members.

My last word is that it is in our best interests to have for our President one resident in Toronto. A President living in Toronto would be more in touch with his or her committees and could carry on to better advantage. I am so certain that this is so that I hope you will all understand that it is in the Society's interest that I wish you to put someone in my place.

And now I must thank our different hostesses who have so kindly given over their homes for our meetings, and also for the delicious refreshments after our labour.

Miss Armour will be glad to receive donations for our next exhibition prizes.

Thank you.

Report of the Exhibition Committee

Your committee beg to report as follows:

The Exhibition was held at Jenkin's Gallery on June 28th. After consulting Rosarians in various locations in order to arrive at a date which would suit the greatest number possible, we finally settled on the above date. Owing to the hot dry June of this year, the roses in many localities came to perfection from one to two weeks earlier than usual, consequently we judged it wise to put the date forward and we believe from the result, that our judgement was in the main correct.

The quality and variety of roses shown was we think of a very high class and the Show as a whole was a decided credit to the Society and of great educational value to the public.

An unfortunate circumstance was that the Street Railway Strike took place at the same date as our Exhibition and this, together with a very wet day, prevented many interested people from attending, and our receipts suffered greatly thereby.

Your committee would take this opportunity of expressing their regret that so small a proportion of our membership, enter the various competitions. Out of a membership of say 600, we had only 35 Exhibitors, and of 28 classes there were 4 in which there were no entries. Your Committee has made the classes so varied that everyone who grows even a few Roses, may compete, and I trust that the coming year will see a large increase in this regard.

The Committee wish to thank most cordially the friends who so generously donated the Trophies, which will be presented to the winners this evening.

All my hurts
My garden spade can heal. A woodland walk,
A quest of river-grapes, a mocking thrush,
A wild rose or rock-loving columbine,
Salve my worst wounds.

LOUISE PHILLIPS

The Summer Exhibition

The Rose Show of 1919 made up in quality what it lacked in quantity, so to speak. As a visitor during the evening said: "This is quite the smartest thing I've been to for a long time." And that was just the impression made on everyone—the small attendance actually enhancing the beauty of the scene, for there was no crowding, and the women flitted about in their charming summer frocks, looking like flowers of a larger growth; while the roses were always visible, in fresh radiance, from every corner of the big rooms.

The Show was in Jenkins' Art Gallery again. Where else could it be, when once the perfection of this setting was known, and the atmosphere of kindly helpfulness pervading it? The music, too, was delightful—and gave just the necessary touch of gaiety.

But alas! there were two unlucky factors this year—the car strike and the rainy day—serious discouragements to many well-wishers of the society. The result was a small attendance—a real misfortune from a pecuniary standpoint; but those who did brave the elements and vicissitudes of jitneys were genuinely enthusiastic and full of delight in the lovely flowers. To the writer the roses seemed more perfect than ever before, although the Show was a little late for nearly all the gardens, both in Toronto and the country. One exhibitor overcame this drawback by her determined and scientific campaign for production. “Rose bushes stripped of all but a few promising buds, and a gallon of wine (liquid manure) served to each bush daily.” The result was a splendid display of H.P.’s, produced from bushes which, without this forcing, would have yielded not one bloom fit for exhibition.

Another display which won much admiration was made by two young amateurs, who had left their country home at 4 a.m. in order to reach the Show rooms early and arrange their flowers with proper care.

“How seriously they all take it!” was the comment of an onlooker as he watched the absorbed exhibitors placing their roses in the space allotted them. And well they might be serious. With the minutes flying by—and an occasional admonition from the President of the Exhibition Committee—(such an excellent President!)—“Ladies and gentlemen, only fifteen minutes more for the completion of Class so and so.”

However, all things had an end, and so had the preparations. The blooms were finally in place, the tables decorated, the vases and bowls filled. And then the judging began.

The prize for the most beautiful rose was once more won by Senator Nicholls, with a splendid specimen of “George Dickson.” The next in point of perfection was a “Pride of Waltham,” shown by Mrs. Caspar Clark. And after them followed a train of exquisite blooms, among which it was hard to choose the winners.

The “Ella Baines” Challenge Bowl was again carried off by Miss Beardmore, who showed a beautiful collection of H.P.’s. The Challenge Silver Basket, presented by the late Col. Sweny, very nearly went again to Miss Strudley, but was awarded to Mr. Miskelly, as having a slightly better collection.

Mr. Miskelly was a most fortunate exhibitor, winning three firsts, a second and a third. The "Avoca Vale" Challenge Cup was awarded to a new member, Mrs. H. C. Scholfield, the McGredy Challenge Cup to Senator Nicholls, who has also three other firsts. The Society congratulates Mrs. G. G. Adam for carrying off the Roseholme Challenge Cup for the third year in succession.

The Judges were: In the Decorative Classes, Mrs. Dunnington-Grubb, Miss Yates, Mr. William Davidson; in the other classes, Mrs. Potts, Professor Buck, Messrs J. H. Dunlop, H. J. Moore, Robert Hughes.

One exhibit that was conspicuous by its absence was a collection of Rose Pests, sent from Ottawa just too late to be shown. Even the oldest rosarians, who felt sure they knew personally every enemy of the rose-bush, would have enjoyed seeing these foes impaled and displayed before a wrathful public. It is to be hoped that next year this gratification will not be denied them. Next year, too, we may hope to see a new Canadian seedling rose, produced by Mr. J. H. Dunlop. A coloured photograph shows it to be extraordinary in size, form and colour.

But how discriminate between roses when they are so varied? There were some single pillar-roses, as square-petalled as an apple blossom, which made one feel that by their exquisite simplicity they had eclipsed the bigger beauties. And there was a flecked "Hiawatha" that was whimsical in its charm. There were noticeably few yellow roses—their day was over; and in this regard the Show was a great loser. But taken as a whole the display was wonderful and full of inspiration for those who love the Queen of Flowers.

Look to the Rose that blows about us—"Lo
Laughing," she says, "Into the World I blow;

At once the silken Tassel of my Purse
Tear, and its Treasure on the Garden throw."

—OMAR KHAYYAM.

ROSE ZEPHYRINE DROUHIN—Grown as a pillar rose at The Elms.

Among the Roses in England

Finding myself in England during the summer of 1916, I contrived to make my way to London when the summer show of the National Rose Society was announced.

It was not the first English Rose show I had seen, nor was it to be my last, for I was fortunate enough to see the show of last summer, of which I shall speak later. But it was, I think, the First Rose Show held since the outbreak of the War and, being a Red Cross benefit, was on a particularly magnificent scale. I know that I came away from it with a feeling of thorough exhaustion and satiety. No doubt for the average rose lover who attends these great shows it furnished only a pleasant hour or so, but to me, a stranger, greedy for new sights and fresh ideas, it was too over-whelming. I was intoxicated by the colour and the glory of it all and not a little bewildered in my efforts to be discriminating and jot down a few notes which would prove of value for future reference.

Those notes I have by me now and I intend to give you the benefit of them, such as they are. Is it necessary to warn my readers that they are but passing impressions and strongly tinged by my own particular likes and dislikes? Also let me remind you that what is true of a rose in England is not necessarily true of the same rose grown in Canada, while even the season alone may make a world of difference. In 1916, for instance, I wrote "Cissie Easlea, a poor, washy yellow," while, three years later I wrote "Cissie Easlea, the largest and finest of the yellows," which only goes to show how variable a rose can be.

Wandering through the gigantic tents between what seemed to be miles of benches laden with exquisite blooms, I was greatly struck by the fact that the outstanding roses of the show comprised comparatively few varieties, some of them old, some new. The older ones which were clearly holding their own against all comers, were Frau Karl Druschki, still the finest of the whites, Madame Melanie Soupert, Madame Abel Chatenay, Hugh Dickson, the Lyon Rose and Captain Hayward, while the more recent roses which were greatly to the fore were George Dickson, H. V. Machin, Mrs. Jos. Welch, Mrs. George Norwood and Augustus Hartmann. Of these, George Dickson is easily the best of the very dark reds, being heavily shaded with maroon. It grows well, but tends to hang its head and seldom blooms after July. H. V. Machin is the most faultless blood-red bloom I have seen, but I know nothing of its behaviour in the garden. Augustus Hartmann is a lighter and a peculiarly brilliant shade of red, an outstanding rose. It grows and blooms splendidly here in Ontario and I recommend it most heartily. Mrs. George Norwood is an enormous bloom of pure pink colour, a very fine exhibition rose. Mrs. Jos. Welch is likewise a very large and beautiful pink rose, although scarcely more than semi-double when full blown.

The finest yellow rose of the year was Margaret Dickson Hamill, which I consider one of the loveliest roses ever produced. Its colour is perhaps best described as golden yellow delicately washed with carmine, a combination which produces something akin to a light orange shade of fine intensity. It has delightful form and perfume also, making it an ideal decorative rose. Unfortunately I did not see it growing out-of-doors, but have reason to believe that as a garden rose it still leaves something to be desired.

Other beautiful new yellow roses were Miss Stewart Clark, which has the colour and form of Rayon d'Or, with greater size; David McKee a fine large, pointed rose of a pure canary yellow; and Lady Plymouth, a tea rose of similar form and colour.

The new red roses included four very fine varieties: Sir Edward Carson, David Gilmore, Lord Kitchener and Red Cross, all beautiful blooms, but, so far as I could see, not especially distinctive. Hugh Dickson's new rose, Archie Gray, was more striking because of its brilliant carmine red colouring, which reminded me of that sterling rose, General McArthur.

The finest of the recent white roses appeared to me to be Mrs. A. W. Atkinson, a hybrid tea rose of great size and fine form, but, like nearly all the newer white roses, deficient in perfume.

The display of climbing roses was one of the finest features of the show and included an astonishing number of large potted vines covered with masses of bloom. The first to catch my eye was Cupid, a large single pillar rose of soft cream pink colour and beautiful cupped form, not unlike a huge single Anemone. The next was Francois Juranville, the finest Wichuriana hybrid I have yet seen. It is a wonderful grower, with an abundance of beautiful glossy foliage and great masses of bloom, each blossom being like a small tea-rose of rich yellowy pink colour and delightful fragrance. If I was impressed by it then, I was even more so last summer, when I saw a magnificent specimen of it in the Rose Walk at Kew Gardens, where it was easily the finest of the pillar roses, with possibly one exception of which I shall speak later.

Other climbing roses which were much to the fore that year were Paul's Scarlet Climber and Paul's Lemon Pillar, both gold medal roses of 1915. The former is a very remarkable Wichuriana hybrid bearing semi-double flowers of good size and pretty form. The colour is almost a pure scarlet, quite dazzling in its brilliancy, and is reported to stand the sun well. In England this rose will make a blaze of colour in the garden for more than a month. Paul's Lemon Pillar is a very different rose. It is the result of crossing Frau Karl Druschki with Marechal Neil and is very much what one would expect from such a cross. The blooms are of great size and fine form, pale lemon or cream in colour, and the plant grows tall and branches freely. If it has inherited much of the hardiness of Fran Karl it will be a great boon to us here in Canada, where large-flowered climbing roses are so difficult to grow.

Having spoken of the climbing roses, I find that I am already among the Decorative Classes, which nowadays form the greatest glory of an English Rose Show. There we see roses at their best, displayed in their natural setting of green foliage, poised with their own peculiar grace on long stems and grouped so as to give full effect to their colouring. And such colouring! It seems, year after year, as though we must be reaching the limits of our colours and colour-combinations in roses and yet the growers never fail to astonish us season after season. Now I have neither the power nor the space at my disposal to describe the beauties of the bowls, baskets, table-decorations and general displays of decorative roses, but will merely mention that the greatest favorites and prize-winners were not all novelties. Irish Elegance, Lady Pirrie, Madame Edouard Herriott and similar old standbys held their own. Nevertheless Margaret D. Hamill, Cupid and Princess Mary, that wonderful single red rose with the texture of velvet, carried off their share of the honours.

It was not until the summer of last year that I again found myself at an English Rose Show and then, curiously enough, it was due to what I considered a bit of very hard luck, namely, the long delay in the sailing of my ship for home.

Meantime I had had a number of happy days wandering about the English countryside and came to experience, I am sure, more thrills of sheer delight at the sight of rose-embowered cottages and lovely gardens than I ever felt at any rose show. I am reminded of an altogether delightful visit to the beautiful home of Miss Gertrude Jekyll, as memorable for its kindly hospitality as for the consummate art and beauty displayed there. Also I love to recall a trip to the rectory at Stratfieldsaye, in Hampshire, the home of that sterling old rosarian, the Rev. F. Page-Roberts, where amid the ravages that war had brought to his, as to most, gardens, he was able to show me some of the most beautiful specimens of climbing roses I have ever seen. There was the lovely little Yellow Banksian smothering the whole end of his greenhouse—out-of-doors, that is to say—and alongside it, a great vine of Climbing Lady Waterlow, full of blossom. But the glory of his garden was a wonderful vine of Fortune's Yellow, fully thirty feet high and twenty broad, upon the house, with hundreds of full-blown blossoms. It was the first specimen of that rose that I had seen and to put it mildly, I was dumb-founded. It seemed too good to be true—like a picture out of a fairy story. The colouring was marvellously beautiful, something like a pale orange suffused with light clear pink, a delicate yet wonderfully intense colour.

A visit to Kew Gardens in the rose season was another rare delight and I made a number of notes there which I count of much more value than those made at any of the Shows, a great many of them being of a negative kind. Only a few of them refer to new roses and are worth giving here. Among the dwarf roses I was particularly impressed by Marie Adelaide, of which there was a fine bed. The colour of this rose, a rich orange yellow, and its form as well, are all that could be desired. Its growth, however, is not over strong and I hear that it mildews badly.

Cherry Page, a semi-double, is a wonderfully vivid rose and fine for the garden. Its colour is a rich light cerise, deeper at the edges of the petals. Its form is cupped and graceful.

Antoine Rivoire, although a comparatively old rose, struck me as being one of the most remarkable garden roses I have seen, for in spite of the extreme delicacy of its colouring, it withstood hot sun splendidly, and showed all the refinement of form and texture which are characteristic of tea roses. Yet it is a Hybrid Tea and quite hardy.

Among the climbing roses I have already mentioned Francois Juranville as showing up in wonderful form at Kew. One other climber equalled it; a rose which, so far, I have not found offered in any catalogue, although I believe it is in commerce. It is called Miss Flora Mitten and is listed by the National Rose Society as a Hybrid Musk. Its growth, however, is very like that of the Multiflora Ramblers. The blossoms are single, in fine heads, like American Pillar, but larger and a most beautiful apple-blossom pink.

Referring to my notes made at the Summer Show of 1919, I find that comparatively few of them refer to actual novelties, as I do not always find those the most interesting roses, by any means. For the sake of my readers, however, I shall confine my remarks chiefly to roses which are new to Canada.

First of all there was A. Dickson and Sons' sensational new rose, Sunstar. It is not over large nor full, but its colouring is very gorgeous, being rich gold shaded and splashed with deep red, like a blood orange. Its perfume is the finest I have noted in any recent rose and very like attar of roses.

Golden Ophelia is another wonderful rose with all the fine qualities of the original Ophelia but pure deep yellow in colour.

Other fine yellows were Christine and Sovereign, but they appeared to me much less remarkable than a huge, full pointed yellow rose called Clara Curtis, which is not yet in commerce.

Capt. Kilbee-Stuart is a very fine new red, similar to H. V. Machin, with larger petals.

Lady Inchiquin possesses a unique shade of red, a kind of light scarlet without a tinge of crimson, and is of fine exhibition form.

Janet and Molly Bligh are both lovely pink roses and quite distinct.

The whites and near-whites included Edith Cavell and Mrs. Elisha Hicks, both splendid roses, although I cannot say that they attracted me greatly.

Lastly, I must mention two fine new climbing roses; Emily Gray, a yellow wichuriana with double blooms, three inches in diameter; and Purity, a large semi-double white, a great improvement on Silver Moon; and two new seedling roses of the Rev. J. H. Pemberton, namely Miriam, a very vivid salmon, and Pax, white. The latter is a Hybrid Musk rose and has been creating quite a stir in England. It is essentially a decorative and garden rose, only semi-double but finely shaped and produced in the greatest profusion throughout the whole season. A delightful rose and appropriately named, it is typical of the present day efforts of English rose-breeders to give us roses which will be "roses for everybody," such that the merest tyro cannot fail to grow them with success and be abundantly rewarded for his pains.

A. H. ROLPH.

Once, long ago, in some sweet garden's hush,
A lover gave you, snow-white, to his love;
And, lifted to her lips, you saw her blush,
And blushed to match her damask cheek above.

THE SARGENT ROSE—A little-known Wichuriana hybrid of great beauty.

Concerning Rose Showing

Beautiful as are the exhibits of Roses and comprehensive as are the classes at The Rose Society of Ontario's Exhibition, which is annually held in Toronto, there is one condition which tends to hide rather than to reveal the full magnificence of the subjects. It is the manner in which they are arranged, and is the condition that the visitor sees in a general way as the eye leisurely scans the hall. The roses are hardly exhibited to the best advantage, and the hall is not large enough for the freedom of display which the nature of the subjects demand.

No one, however, will deny that the artistic skill which is displayed in the arrangement of the baskets of Roses or of the decorated tables is of the highest order, and were the general classes arranged and exhibited with equal skill, the improvement would be such as to make the officials realize that in the past much of the possible beauty of the display had been lost.

A PLEA FOR VASES.—This article is not a criticism but rather a plea that the Rose be given latitude to express in its own mute way the beauty and refinement of form and color so that the public may see it at its very best, and that the grower may through this cause be encouraged to produce blooms of the best quality. These two essentials may be brought about by exhibiting the roses on long stems in raised vases, or other containers, and by placing these far enough apart on the tables so that the beauty of each individual exhibit, as well as the beauty of the whole may readily be seen.

The practice of cutting Roses with short stems, devoid of leaves, and crowding these into boxes on narrow tables should not be encouraged at any exhibition. It does not allow of skill in arrangement, tends to hide the many good qualities of the flowers, and thus does not do the grower justice. In many cases it favors the exhibiting of inferior flowers. These things combined tend to detract from the exhibition as a whole aesthetically as well as from an educational standpoint.

THE EDUCATIONAL STANDPOINT.—The great purpose of a Rose show is Education. Then let us emphasise the points necessary to favor this. The subjects should be well grown, and should be exhibited under the best conditions to reveal the natural beauty of form and color. To exhibit them under other conditions is a derogatory practice. Visitors to our exhibitions cannot see these qualities when stooping over the tables, rather the Roses should be so arranged that visitors could see all the good points of the subjects while leisurely walking around the tables. The eye is one of the great channels of education. One of the chief things to which the eye educates the mind is beauty. If the eye cannot see, so much the worse for education. When the method of arrangement is such that the judges have to remove from the containers a large percentage of the subjects to ascertain qualities or defects which may exist on the lower petals, stems, leaves or other part, the method cannot be said to be right. Exhibits so staged are not fully educational, as many parts which should be emphasised cannot be seen.

Roses of the same color when closely packed together on flat boxes look very much alike. Crowding detracts from educational merit. It does not allow of artistic arrangement, a factor of the highest educational value, for in it the eye sees the relation of the exhibitor's skill in growing, to the art expressed in showing the subject to the best advantage. Thus when artistic arrangement is precluded by crowding or in any other way, one of the great objects of the exhibition is defeated, and the latter is not characterised by the dignity which all educational exhibits should possess. After all is said and done, the truly educational and the truly aesthetic, go hand in hand.

THE CHOICE OF JUDGES.—Judges differ in their ideals. In some idealism cannot be said to be largely fostered. Sometimes Judges more capable to judge other subjects than roses are asked to officiate at our rose shows. This is neither helpful to the judge or the society. This statement is, however, not a criticism of Judges. It is a plea to the Directors of Societies to discriminate in the choice of judges. It should be the aim to appoint experts to judge the classes of subjects in which they are expert. The Judges' opinion carries great weight with the masses. If he or she expresses the thought that old fashioned methods are right, a certain number of people will believe this, and prepare to make their exhibits next year in accordance. The Judge should not think that as soon as the judging is done his responsibility in the matter ceases. He should make it his duty to advise the officials of changes he considers necessary and to suggest a means whereby these changes can be brought about. The Judge who does not do this when he knows that certain changes are desirable is more responsible for wrong methods of arrangement than the officers of the Society.

ENCOURAGING THE LOVE OF ROSES.—No one can visit a rose exhibition and not feel a glow of love for the wonderful flowers. What a tonic to the tired and jaded mind. What a comparison between a dusty office and a brilliantly lit hall filled with the marvels of an omnipotent creative skill. Who wouldn't love Roses? We know folks love them, then let us favor and promote the methods which will allow people not only to see the Rose, but to see her at her best, individually or collectively as the case may be.

What a splendid work is that of bringing the products of our Rose gardens together. In a garden we may but see the best of that garden, but at an exhibition we may see the best from every garden, and so our knowledge of Roses will grow, and through that knowledge our love will be intensified until finally we will find that its transforming power will fill our minds with thoughts of these beautiful things, and convert our hearts into veritable gardens.

HENRY J. MOORE

Let others choos sweet jessamine,
Or weave their lily-crown aright,
And let who love it pluck and twine
Loose clematis, or draw delight
From meadowsweets' cluster downy white—
The rose, the perfect rose, be mine.

—CHRISTINA ROSSETTI.

Propagation of Roses

By S. B. McMichael

In connection with the work of the Society it occurred to me that some of our members might be interested in a few details regarding the propagating of roses. A year ago when there was every indication that it would be difficult and perhaps impossible to secure young plants from dealers, I decided to try growing a few plants on my own account, to replace some older bushes and fill up a few bare spots in the rose beds.

Following the directions of two or three authorities on the propagation of roses from cuttings, I experimented on six or eight slips only. Most of these formed roots, and during the past season developed into plants that will probably bloom next year. This Fall I have started two dozen cuttings, the majority of which seem to be making progress. Nearly one-half of them are Dorothy Perkins, and if they develop into worth while plants I intend to place them along a new wire fence that I have just had erected between my own and my next door neighbor's yard.

The practice that I have adopted may be briefly described as follows. Four inch pots are filled with garden loam with about an inch of cinders or gravel in the bottom. The contents of the pots are thoroughly soaked with water until in a semi-aqueous condition. The pots are set in the ground with the top of the pots level with the surface of the garden bed. Around the pots is a framework banked on all sides with loam, and on top of which I have placed a window frame with glass.

For the cuttings new wood should be selected. The cuttings should be about six inches long and clipped of all leaves except two or three at the top. Both above and below the joint where the new wood connects with the stem, the latter should be cut leaving about one inch of the old wood. When the cuttings have been made they can be placed one cutting to a pot in the wet soil prepared for them. The base of the cutting should be about one inch from the bottom of the pots. The cuttings are watered two or three times a week until they begin to show signs of life, when less water is applied. The glass is left over the frame and the cuttings given plenty of sun, which, as I understand it, is not harmful. To bring the cuttings on the pots may be either left in the garden through the Winter and partially protected from snow and frost, or when the cold weather sets in, taken into the house and given a place in some sunny window where they may develop. In the Spring they may be returned to the garden and kept in the pots all through the first Summer. After becoming dormant in the Autumn they should be set out in the same way as any other rose plants in the places they are to occupy permanently. The objection may be raised that these plants may not be as hardy as those that are budded on briar stock. My own experience has been that plants grown on their own roots are quite as vigorous and quite as able to stand the Ontario Winters as the budded plant.

September is the ideal time to set out cuttings. Cuttings can, of course, be made in the Spring, but most of us object to cutting new wood which later on would bear flowers. All authorities agree that roses cannot be propagated from cuttings during about three months of mid-summer. It has been tried time and time again, but invariably ends in failure. Just why this is so I do not know. I do know that I tried it myself as a matter of experiment and out of twenty-five cuttings failed to obtain a single one that rooted.

I am convinced that many of our members have in their garden some roses that are favorites and would like to increase the number of those particular plants. Propagating the roses themselves from cuttings is an interesting and inexpensive diversion. I have already interested two or three personal friends, who are undertaking to conduct their own experiments with this Autumn's cuttings.

I saw the sweetest flower wild nature yields,
A fresh blown musk-rose; 'twas the first that threw
Its sweets upon the summer, graceful it grew
As is the wand that queen Titania wields,
And, as I feasted on its fragrancy
I thought the garden rose it far excelled.

—J. KEATS.

The St. Catharines Summer Exhibition

The summer exhibition of the St. Catharines Horticultural Society has been from its inception, in 1904, essentially a rose exhibition and has come to be generally known as such, although there has been associated with it displays of specimen plants, cut flowers from bloom in season, and also seasonable fruits, such as strawberries, cherries, etc. The exhibition started in a small way in the second floor of the Masonic Temple, and during the following fifteen years has grown to be one of the largest annual exhibitions of its kind staged anywhere in this section of the Continent.

From the beginning the Society has adopted the policy of displaying its exhibits in vases, and as the exhibition has grown the Society has increased its facilities for making these displays in this form.

There has been each year an increasing number of sections in the prize list for roses, and a consequent increase in the total sum awarded for prizes. In recent years there has been added a class especially from small gardens and also one for novices.

In the main prize list the past season, there were eight sections devoted to displays of Hybrid Perpetuals, Hybrids Teas or Teas. The first section was for the best and most varied collection of roses, two of each variety. This has usually brought forth collections of from 70 to nearly 100 varieties. Other sections were for 36, 24 and 18 varieties, and also for the largest and most effective vases of red, pink, white and yellow roses.

There were, in this year's prize list, nineteen sections devoted to Hybrid Perpetuals, of 12, 6 and 3 varieties, and a number of named varieties, three of each.

In Hybrid Teas or Teas there were thirty sections, beginning with 18, 12, 6 and 3 varieties, and the balance of named varieties. Thirteen sections were devoted to the miscellaneous class, including competitions for Lt.-Col. Mac-Kendrick's silver cup, the President's prize of a silver flower basket, silver and bronze medals from the Society, and other special prizes.

In the class of roses from small gardens 11 sections were listed and in the class for novices, nine sections.

In addition to the foregoing, there were offered the Society's silver and bronze medals, competition open to amateur members of Horticultural and Rose Societies, for the best display of H.P., H.T., or Tea Roses.

The entire prize list, as above enumerated, is restricted to amateur rose growers, so that the exhibition may be called an exhibition of roses by amateur growers. There is one competition open to professionals, semi-professionals or amateurs, the prize being the Society's challenge cup. The St. Catharines Society bars itself from this competition, as also from the Society Competition.

It is almost needless to say that the summer exhibitions of the St. Catharines Horticultural Society, as well as the autumn exhibitions which have been devoted largely to Gladioli, Asters and other Fall flowers, continued through these many years, have done much, not only to increase a love among all our people for the Queen of Flowers, but to make St. Catharines, possibly more than any other city in the East, a City of Roses, and this has culminated in the possession of the first Civic Rose Garden in Canada, which was beautifully designed by Mr. H. J. Moore, of Niagara Falls, Ont., and made possible by a donation from the President of the St. Catharines Horticultural Society.

The St. Catharines Horticultural Society started out in its exhibition work by making its prizes principally cash, and its money awards now reach a very respectable sum, and for roses alone the past season, as follows: H.P., H.T. and T., $71.50; H.P., $45.50; H.T. or T., $71.50; Miscellaneous, $25.00; small gardens, $33.50; Novices, $19.00, making a total of $266.50.

At all times and in all ages gardens have been amongst the objects of the greatest interest to mankind, and the gardener's art has contributed to the delight of all men in their time.—Charles Dickens.

Climbing Roses

Usually not more than half a dozen varieties of Climbing or Rambling Roses are grown in our gardens. With such a small selection, would-be growers are led to surmise that these varieties constitute all that are hardy, and so they choose one or two of those they see, with the result that a general knowledge of the class in question is very limited. The Climbing and Rambling varieties may be numbered in scores, and not in half dozens, as is generally supposed. There is no sound reason that any restriction should be placed on the number of varieties grown in our gardens until the hundred or so which exist are exhausted.

The following list, while not complete nor strictly up to date, may by the readers be found comprehensive enough for their requirements. The name, class, and color are given.

Aglaia, or Yellow Rambler—Flowers bright yellow, borne on pyramidal trusses, like those of Crimson Rambler.

American Pillar (Multiflora)—Flowers single of a beautiful pink shade, with bright yellow stamens. Borne in large clusters.

Auguste Barbier (Wichuraiana)—Flowers rosy crimson.

Aviateur Bleriot (Wichuraiana)—Flowers of a delightful saffron yellow, requires good winter's protection.

Blush Rambler (Climbing Polyantha)—Flowers pale rosy pink, borne in large trusses.

Climbing Mrs. W. H. Cutbush (Climbing Polyantha)—Flowers light rose pink.

Climbing White pet (Climbing Polyantha)—Flowers pure white, borne in large clusters.

Cordelia (Hybrid Multiflora)—Flowers when in the bud stage, coppery yellow, lemon yellow when open, produced in clusters.

Crimson Rambler (Climbing Polyantha)—Bright crimson flowers, in large trusses of pyramidal shape. A well known and excellent variety.

Climbing Rose, CHRISTINE WRIGHT.

Dorothy Dennison (Wichuraiana)—Flowers shell pink. The bases of the petals are creamy white, a sport from Dorothy Perkins.

Dorothy Perkins (Wichuraiana Gabriel Luizet)—Flowers shell pink, borne in large clusters, a beautiful and well known variety.

Electra (Multiflora)—Flowers yellow, a good climbing variety.

Excelsa (Winchuraiana)—Flowers bright carmine scarlet, borne in clusters. A very distinct and desirable climber. Foliage dense and glossy.

Flower of Fairfield (Climbing Polyantha)—Flowers similar to those of Crimson Rambler, of which it is a sport, perhaps a shade more brilliant.

Hiawatha (Wichuraiana)—Flowers deep crimson, shading to white at the base. Single, foliage dark and glossy.

Klondyke (Hybrid Wichuraiana)—Flowers yellow, changing to primrose with age.

Lady Gay (Wichuraiana)—Flowers cherry pink, fading to white, borne in clusters.

Paradise (Wichuraiana)—Flowers pink and white, single, borne in clusters of great grace and beauty.

Paul's Scarlet Climber (Climbing Polyantha)—Flowers fiery scarlet, borne in immense clusters. A sensational variety, probably destined to be grown universally.

Shower of Gold (Wichuraiana)—Flowers yellow, shaped like a rosette, a very desirable yellow climber.

White Dorothy (Wichuraiana)—Flowers white, similar in all other respects to Dorothy Perkins, of which it is a sport.
